Brief report

VIVA College's Department of Botany successfully provided a certificate program in herbarium making, which improved participants' abilities to gather and preserve plant specimens. Under the direction of seasoned instructors, the program offered a comprehensive curriculum that included theoretical instruction, practical workshops, and field visits. With an emphasis on correct labeling and data recording, participants obtained useful insights into specimen preparation, documentation, and storage. The training stressed the value of herbaria in botanical research and teaching in addition to offering beneficial networking possibilities. With plans for more programs along these lines, the department's success with this one demonstrates its dedication to supporting hands-on learning and skill development in the subject of botany.

Brief report

VIVA College's Department of Botany successfully provided a certificate program in herbarium making, which improved participants' abilities to gather and preserve plant specimens. Under the direction of seasoned instructors, the program offered a comprehensive curriculum that included theoretical instruction, practical workshops, and field visits. With an emphasis on correct labeling and data recording, participants obtained useful insights into specimen preparation, documentation, and storage. The training stressed the value of herbaria in botanical research and teaching in addition to offering beneficial networking possibilities. With plans for more programs along these lines, the department's success with this one demonstrates its dedication to supporting hands-on learning and skill development in the subject of botany.
